

General Information

Assessment of applications and admission to the Master's Programme in Aerospace Engineering is conducted on a rolling basis.

All applications must be submitted online, including necessary documents. Original documents must be provided upon request.

Applicants who require a visa to study in Austria are advised to begin preparing the necessary documents (including legalization, if applicable) for the Austrian consular service as soon as they are notified that their application has been received and is under review. Please note that visa processing can take approximately 3 to 15 months. Applicants are solely responsible for their visa application; the university cannot intervene in this process. We therefore strongly recommend applying as early as possible to allow sufficient time for visa procedures.

The University of Applied Sciences Wiener Neustadt (FHWN) requires students to be present from the first day of the semester. No exceptions can be made for applicants who have not received their visa in time.

Class attendance is required and mandatory under the FHWN teaching model. Master's students must be in Wiener Neustadt on the official start date of the programme (mid-September, at the time of matriculation). Late arrivals may result in denial of admission to the programme.

Applications for the academic year beginning September 2027 can be submitted from October 2026.

Who is eligible to be admitted to Aerospace Engineering?

To be eligible for admission, applicants must have, or be in the process of completing, the following:

- A Bachelor's degree in a relevant field such as Aerospace Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, Mechatronics, Technical Physics, etc., provided that at least 30 ECTS credits in core engineering subjects (e.g., engineering elements, thermodynamics, fluid dynamics, mechanics) are included in the curriculum.
OR
- A Diplom-Ingenieur degree (Dipl.-Ing. FH or TU/TH) in Aerospace Engineering, Mechatronics, or another relevant engineering discipline (see above).
- Proof of English proficiency required for all applicants whose first and only native language is not English, can be provided through:
 - Completion of a relevant academic degree (as listed above) taught entirely in English or one of the following:
 - IELTS Academic, min. 7.0 overall band score with no sub-score below 6.5
 - TOEFL, IBT minimum score of 95
 - Cambridge Advanced, Level C1
 - Duolingo English Test: minimum score of 130
 - Note: if an applicant's English proficiency appears insufficient during the interview, the Head of Programme may request the submission of one of the above-mentioned certificates to verify C1-level competence in advanced English.

Schedule

Applications for September 2027 can be submitted starting October 2026

Assessment of applications and admission to the Master's Programme in Aerospace Engineering is conducted on a rolling basis.
